

Paul Nathan

Paul joined Freemans as Head of Litigation in September 2010. He presently runs the firm's Litigation and Insolvency Department and also advises on company commercial matters and employment matters. Paul is authorised to act as a Licensed Insolvency Practitioner by the Solicitor's Regulation authority.

Paul was admitted to practise in January 1983 and initially practised as an entertainment lawyer. His clients included Madness and Tears for Fears. Thereafter Paul concentrated on a wide base of litigation until becoming a Partner in the practise of Michael Lawson Turner & Nathan where his litigation was commercial and business orientated. He began to advise and act for accountant licensed insolvency practitioners. In 1990 Paul obtained an Insolvency Practitioner's License from the Law Society and began to specialise in Insolvency and Company Commercial Litigation.

Paul joined Denniss Matthews solicitors in March 1992 (becoming a partner in 1994) principally to act as Receiver of businesses for one of Denniss Matthews' banking clients. Over the next 10 years Paul ran in excess of 110 businesses as a going concern in Receivership. He also took appointments as Trustee in Bankruptcy and Liquidator and acted as Nominee and Supervisor of Individual Voluntary Arrangements. Paul also continued to act and advise in commercial litigation and company/ commercial matters. Paul became Senior Partner at Denniss Matthews in 2006.

Paul has three children and is a musician and songwriter when not practising law.
